Financial strength. Local expertise. Global reach.

U.S. Bank Names Michael Whelan as Head of European Relationship Management

U.S. Bank Global Corporate Trust Services (GCTS) has appointed Michael Whelan as senior vice president and new head of relationship management. He is based in London and reports to managing director of Corporate Trust - Europe.

"Michael brings considerable expertise and experience to his role having been in the corporate trust industry for almost 20 years," said Bryan Calder, president of U.S. Bank Global Corporate Trust Services. "His knowledge and established relationships will strengthen our team and capabilities as we continue to grow and develop our European business."

Whelan joins U.S. Bank GCTS from The Bank of New York Mellon, where he was managing director of corporate and sovereign debt business within Corporate Trust. Prior to that, he held management positions at various institutions including UBS, HSBC and JPMorgan. Whelan will head the three existing relationship management teams covering conventional debt, collateralised debt obligation and structured finance, bringing efficiencies for clients who issue across multiple product types.

"Our strong U.S. Bank management team here in Europe has more than 15 years of corporate trust experience in administering all types of debt structures, said Cubitt. "Two of our top strategic goals as we build our business in Europe are to provide consistent, timely and truly differentiated client service, and to offer proactive strategic solutions to our clients. Adding someone of Michael's caliber is a significant and welcome addition to our team in achieving these goals."
